FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE AND RELATED ACTIVITIES

1. The peculiar nature of intelligence operations makes it difficult to project national intelligence planning in terms comparable to those employed in a program aimed at the attainment of manpower or production goals. While intelligence must intensify its activities if it would audit the Soviet world's growth in strength and estimate its intentions, expansion in itself offers no guarantee of improved intelligence. Improvement in the intelligence product is dependent not only upon increased collection of reliable foreign intelligence but upon the skill with which it is evaluated and assembled in the form of estimates. Thus the root problem of intelligence is obtaining personnel skilled in collection and analysis evaluation.

2. Expanded-domestic-and-overseas-facilities-for-training are-presently-in-process-of-construction. Existing plans contemplate expansion within the next two years to three times the current strength of personnel engaged in intelligence and Related Activities. Expanded domestic and overseas facilities for training are presently in process of construction. A sizeable portion portion of that strength should consist of personnel from the armed forces.

4. To improve the overall value of their intelligence product, the national intelligence agencies must focus added emphasis upon three essential parts of their program:

First, they must make certain that substantive objectives in field activity, research, and estimates are properly related to the political and military problems confronting members of the National Security Council.

Second, they must alleviate the existing division of responsibility among intelligence agencies of the government that the resources and activities of each are so must be so synchronized as to that the resources and activities of each provide for maximum support for the attainment of these objectives.

Third, they must constantly re-assess and strengthen their capabilities and resources.

5. It is especially important that collection facilities of the national intelligence agencies be improved. Efforts are being made ~~in-the to establishment establish~~ ~~ef-an accurate priority~~ priorities of essential elements of information. This requirement is especially important in the field of clandestine collection where extraordinary difficulties are encountered.

6. Establishment of a coordinated program for systematic analysis of the Soviet and satellite economies should provide a better appraisal of the capabilities and long-range intentions of the USSR. It should likewise suggest possible avenues of U. S. counteraction by exposing the vulnerabilities of the USSR and its satellites.

7. Progress has been made in the collection of intelligence by scientific means (as distinct from the collection of scientific intelligence itself), but much remains to be accomplished in this field, ~~especially in view of the difficulties encountered in~~ "conventional" clandestine activities.

8. In the coordination of foreign intelligence among national intelligence agencies, the Director of Central Intelligence is required by law to correlate the activities of each in order to ensure that no gaps are left uncovered between agencies. At the same time by recommendation to the NSC he can initiate action to prevent duplication of effort or overlapping of one agency upon the field of action or functions of another. The Central Intelligence Agency is likewise charged with responsibility for services of common concern which can most advantageously be performed centrally. While progress has been made in this process of coordination, there is still need for improvement.

9. The Intelligence Advisory Committee with representation from each of the departmental intelligence agencies has been increasingly helpful in facilitating consultation and the exchange of opinion among intelligence chiefs. The IAC provides a means whereby the chief of intelligence of each agency of government can comment upon, concur in, or object to recommendations, proposals, or conclusions regarding problems of ~~mutual~~ national intelligence concern.

10. To provide rapid dissemination of information on significant military or political events, there has been created an interdepartmental Watch Committee whose responsibility it is to review systematically all incoming reports and to be alert for indications of critical moves. Facilities for prompt transmission and for evaluation of these indications are constantly being improved.

II. a. In-the-projection-of-intelligence-programs,-it-is anticipated-that More and more critical information within the USSR and its satellites must be sought by ~~eover~~-and clandestine means, either directly or scientifically. The ordinary difficulties of "conventional" clandestine operations collection are hugely magnified within the Soviet orbit where virtually the entire population is covered with a vast counterespionage net and where state surveillance severely restricts opportunities for penetration. Not only do the enormous difficulties of such clandestine operations activities strain available resources of qualified personnel but they may be expected to multiply in costliness and thus require increasingly greater expenditures.

b. In-evert The output in intelligence programs ~~output~~ varies almost directly with the allocation of personnel and facilities. Present-limitations-operate-to-the-effect-that a-minimum-program-to-meet-fixed-commitments-can-be-met-only with-the-greatest-difficulty-with-no-margin-for-satisfying increasing-demands-resulting-from-the-deteriorating-world situation. In the opinion of the I.A.C. representatives of the Armed Forces, presently directed personnel cuts will make it impossible to maintain even this minimum program programs.

The Department of State indicates difficulty in obtaining budgetary provision for adequate personnel expansion.

12. a. In summary, the sharpened intensity of U.S.-Soviet relationships emphasizes the immediate need for intensification of intelligence and related activities. Extraordinary difficulties-exist-especially-in-the-collection-of-landes-time-intelligence-within-the-Soviet-orbit-where-state surveillance-and-mass-counterespionage-activity-stringently limit-access-to-critical-information. Additional funds and personnel will continue to be required, not only for expansion of the intelligence services but for the improvement in the quality of their product, which neither now or in the foreseeable future is likely to be all that the planners and policy-makers desire.

b. At the same time, the intelligence services, currently taxed with expanded requirements, as-the-result-of-hostilities in-Korea-and-rearmament-in-Europe, must adequately prepare for vast expansion in the event of the spread of hostilities. If the intelligence services are to prepare for these wartime operations while undertaking commitments that currently strain their present capabilities, it is imperative that they obtain sufficient personnel and the logistical support required for the execution of these tasks.
